

LOVE & LIABILITY

He Claims...

Firm: Law Office of Mark. A. Ticer

Practice: He sues insurance companies.

Alma Mater: Southern Methodist University Dedman School of Law

Why you need to know him:

For over 30 years, Mark Ticer has been known as the Dallas attorney who fiercely fights for consumers and businesses who face disputes with their insurance companies. From handling homeowners, auto, health, life and accidental death insurance claims and coverage issues, he is the thorn in the insurance company's side that won't go away – until he wins.

MELONEY PERRY

She Claims...

Firm: Perry Law, P.C.

Practice: She defends insurance companies.

Alma Mater: Southern Methodist University Dedman School of Law

Why you need to know her:

In a career spanning over 20 years, Meloney has earned a reputation as a fierce and dedicated advocate for her insurance and legal clients. Her practice is focused on defending insurance companies involved in coverage disputes, bad faith claims and class-action litigation. When it comes to insurance defense, chances are she has seen it and done it.

Words to live by:

"Relationships are the reasons deals get done."

They Claim...

Each Other. They're married. Mark and Meloney first met in 2008 at a state bar insurance law section event. The love language of insurance later brought them together and the couple married in 2012.

Feel free to call them the James Carville and Mary Matalin of insurance law. Mark and Meloney are strong advocates for their clients on either side of the insurance table, with their own unique approaches. Mark is the fearless, no-holds-barred attorney, who is creative and will outwork his opponents. Meloney is personable, approachable, builds relationships and looks for solutions. While they share office space and have tried some cases together, Meloney says, "that as a couple, we don't argue about the law."

In fact, they share many commonalities. Mark and Meloney are devoted to their family and spending time with their daughters. He has two from a previous marriage and so does she. In the busy world of insurance law, both make time to travel with their daughters to California, Hawaii or even as close as Stillwater, Oklahoma. When they are not traveling, Mark and Meloney spend quality time watching their favorite shows and movies.

Mark will tell you that Meloney makes him laugh, while she says Mark is the hardest worker she knows.

"Having an office together is pretty remarkable," says Meloney. "It's nice because at the end of the day, there he is."

So, despite being on opposites of the courtroom, they have a policy that insures a successful union. As Meloney puts it, "Couples need projects, we have lawsuits. We have tried cases together and we have fun sparring, but we never fight about the law."
